REGIONAL DISTRIBUTION SUMMARY

FOOD DISTRIBUTION SUMMARY

REGION III

Approximately 87% of the food consumed in FEMA Region III is warehoused within the region. The table below summarizes the source and magnitude of all shipments from warehouses to supermarkets within the region. Three states, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, are largely self-sufficient, warehousing between 69% to 81% of their food supplies within their own borders. The other two states, West Virginia and Delaware, and the District of Columbia, are heavily dependent on out-of-state warehouses for food shipments. While only 37% of West Virginia's food supplies are warehoused within its state boundaries, none of the District of Columbia's and Delaware's food stocks come from within their own borders. Most of the food stocks going into West Virginia, the District of Columbia and Delaware are from neighboring states within the same region (Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland) so that interstate coordination will be required under crisis relocation conditions. In addition, almost 20% of West Virginia's and Delaware's food supplies come from another region (Ohio in Region V and New Jersey in Region II), highlighting a need for interregional coordination as well.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region III shows that the District of Columbia is totally dependent on warehouses outside the district for its food supplies. None of the major distributors supplying food to District of Columbia residents is warehoused within the boundaries of the district. The chief supplier is Maryland, which warehouses 84% of the District's food stocks. In addition to Maryland, other Region III states (Pennsylvania and Virginia) supply 13% of the food consumed within the District. Thus interstate coordination will be essential in planning for the distribution of food to District of Columbia residents under crisis relocation conditions.

Most of the food coming from Maryland is in the hands of 5 distributors, while the remaining stocks warehoused in Pennsylvania, Virginia and New Jersey come mainly from 3 distributors.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region III, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the District of Columbia food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

DELAWARE SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region III shows that Delaware is totally dependent on warehouses outside the state for its food supplies. None of the major distributors supplying food to Delaware residents maintain warehouses within the boundaries of the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in Pennsylvania, which warehouse roughly 54% of Delaware's food supplies. In addition, distributors located in Maryland account for 27% of Delaware's food stocks, while suppliers from New Jersey (Region II) account for the remaining 19% of Delaware's food supplies. Thus interstate as well as interregional coordination will be required in planning for the distribution of food to Delaware residents under crisis relocation conditions.

Most of the food coming from Pennsylvania is in the hands of 8 distributors, while stocks warehoused in Maryland are in the hands of 4 distributors. An additional 3 major distributors in New Jersey warehouse the rest of the food consumed in Delaware.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region III, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Delaware food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

MARYLAND SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region III shows that the supermarkets of Maryland are largely served by warehouses located within the state. Approximately 80% of the food currently reaching Maryland residents is warehoused within the boundaries of the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors in Pennsylvania, which warehouse roughly 11% of Maryland's food stocks. Thus there will be some requirement for interstate coordination of food distribution to Maryland residents under crisis relocation conditions. Maryland itself plays an important role in the food supplies of other Region III states, supplying 84% of the food consumed in the District of Columbia, 27% of the food consumed in Delaware, and 18% of the food consumed in Virginia.

Five of the top ten distributors in Region III have warehouses in Maryland. These distributors account for 50% of the food stored for in-state consumption. An additional 4 distributors account for another 27% of Maryland's food supplies. Most of the food warehoused in other states is in the hands of distributors in Pennsylvania, and more than 6 distributors in Virginia, New Jersey and West Virginia.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region III, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Maryland food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

PENNSYLVANIA SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region III shows that the supermarkets of Pennsylvania are largely served by warehouses located within the state. Approximately 81% of the food currently reaching Pennsylvania residents is warehoused within the boundaries of the state. The remaining food stocks are scattered among a variety of distributors in Ohio (Region V), New Jersey & New York (Region II), Maryland & West Virginia (Region III), and California (Region IX). Thus there will be some requirement for interstate as well as interregional coordination in planning for food distribution to Pennsylvania residents under crisis relocation conditions. Pennsylvania itself plays an important role in the food supplies of other states, supplying over half of the food consumed in Delaware, 20% of the food consumed in New Jersey, and 11% of the food consumed in Maryland.

Five of the top ten distributors in Region III have warehouses in Pennsylvania. These distributors account for 39% of the food stored for in-state consumption. An additional 32 distributors account for another 40% of Pennsylvania's food supplies. Most of the food warehoused in other states is in the hands of 12 distributors in New Jersey & New York, 7 in Ohio, and more than 7 in Maryland, West Virginia and California.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region III, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Pennsylvania food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

VIRGINIA SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region III shows that the supermarkets of Virginia are largely served by warehouses located within the state. Close to 70% of the food currently reaching Virginia residents is warehoused within the boundaries of the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in Maryland, which warehouse roughly 18% of Virginia's food stocks. In addition to Maryland, distributors located in North Carolina (Region IV) account for 9% of the food consumed in Virginia. Thus there will be some requirement for interstate as well as interregional coordination in planning for the distribution of food to Virginia residents under crisis relocation conditions. Virginia itself plays a role in the food supplies of West Virginia, supplying 31% of the food consumed by West Virginia residents.

Six of the top ten distributors in Region III have warehouses in Virginia. These distributors account for 49% of the food stored for in-state consumption. An additional 15 distributors account for 17% of Virginia's food supplies. Most of the food warehoused in other states is in the hands of 7 distributors in Maryland, 8 in North Carolina, and more than 10 distributors in Tennessee, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Oregon.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region III, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the Virginia food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

WEST VIRGINIA SUMMARY

The statistical profile of food distribution in Region III shows that West Virginia is heavily dependent on warehouses outside the state for its food supplies. Only 37% of the food currently reaching West Virginia residents is warehoused within the boundaries of the state. The chief out-of-state suppliers are a variety of distributors located in Virginia, which warehouse roughly 31% of West Virginia's food stocks. In addition, distributors located in Ohio (Region V) supply 19% of the food consumed in West Virginia. Thus interstate as well as interregional coordination will be required in planning for the distribution of food to West Virginia residents under crisis relocation conditions.

Within West Virginia, 11 distributors account for 36% of the food stored for in-state consumption. Most of the food coming from other states is in the hands of 8 distributors in Virginia, 11 in Ohio, and more than 11 in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kentucky and North Carolina.

The statistical profile describing food distribution in Region III, coupled with the FEMA food distribution guidelines, provide nuclear civil protection planners with a feasible approach for reallocating food supplies under conditions of crisis relocation. This statistical profile can be used to modify the West Virginia food support annex to include food distribution details which are consistent with regional food distribution patterns.

APPENDIX D

SAMPLE REALLOCATION PLAN

FOR

THE RICHMOND RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE

INTRODUCTION

Nuclear Civil Protection (NCP) Planning encompasses two strategies: in-place protection and crisis relocation. Under the crisis relocation strategy, people from areas threatened by a high risk of nuclear attack will be relocated to hosting areas judged to be safely removed from the hazardous effects of nuclear explosion. The existing food distribution system must then be adjusted and reconfigured to meet the needs of the relocated population.

This plan has been developed to provide a quantitative picture of food distribution networks serving the Richmond risk area and its host counties before and after relocation. It discusses the adjustments and strategies entailed in the proposed reallocation plan. In addition, it addresses the problem of transportation stress experienced by major distributors as a result of the reconfiguration of the existing food distribution system.

RICHMOND RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE
SUMMARY OF EXISTING FOOD DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM

Under crisis relocation conditions, approximately 597,000 residents currently living in the Richmond risk area (which includes Richmond City, Colonial Heights, Hopewell, Henrico County, and parts of Petersburg, Hanover County, Chesterfield County, Dinwiddie County, Prince George County, and Nottoway County) will have to relocate to lower-risk host areas within Virginia. Exhibit 1 illustrates the evacuation pattern of the Richmond risk area.

The statistical profile of food distribution in the Richmond Risk Area Conglomerate shows that area residents are largely served by warehouses located within the Conglomerate. Close to 70% of the food currently reaching area residents is warehoused within a 10-mile radius of the City of Richmond. An additional 17.5% of the area's food stocks come from within the state of Virginia, mainly from Norfolk and Salem. Out-of-region suppliers (North Carolina and Tennessee in Region IV) account for another 10% of the Conglomerate's food stocks.

Within the Conglomerate, Richfood Inc., Safeway Stores and A & P Tea Co., which maintain warehouses in or near Richmond City, account for almost 70% of the food stored for in-area consumption. These three distributors supply roughly 87% of the food consumed in the Richmond risk areas, and 48% of the food consumed in the host counties. Most of the food warehoused outside the Conglomerate comes from 2 distributors in Norfolk, Virginia (Colonial Stores and Pantry Pride), and 2 in Raleigh, North Carolina (Winn-Dixie and Colonial Stores). The current annual sales volume of each distributor serving the conglomerate is listed by county in Attachment A-1.

Of the three major distributors, Richfood Inc. supplies almost 36% of the Conglomerate's retail food stores, while Safeway and A & P command 23% and 11% of the market respectively. Exhibit 2 details the market share of these distributors in the risk and host area. The geographic area covered by each of these three distributors is roughly identical, serving primarily a variety of counties and independent cities within the state of Virginia, including the risk areas of Norfolk and Lynchburg in addition to Richmond. The service area of Richfood Inc. extends into the risk area of Baltimore in Maryland, and the north central part of North Carolina, including the risk areas of Raleigh and Winston-Salem.

EXHIBIT 1
 EVACUATION PATTERN

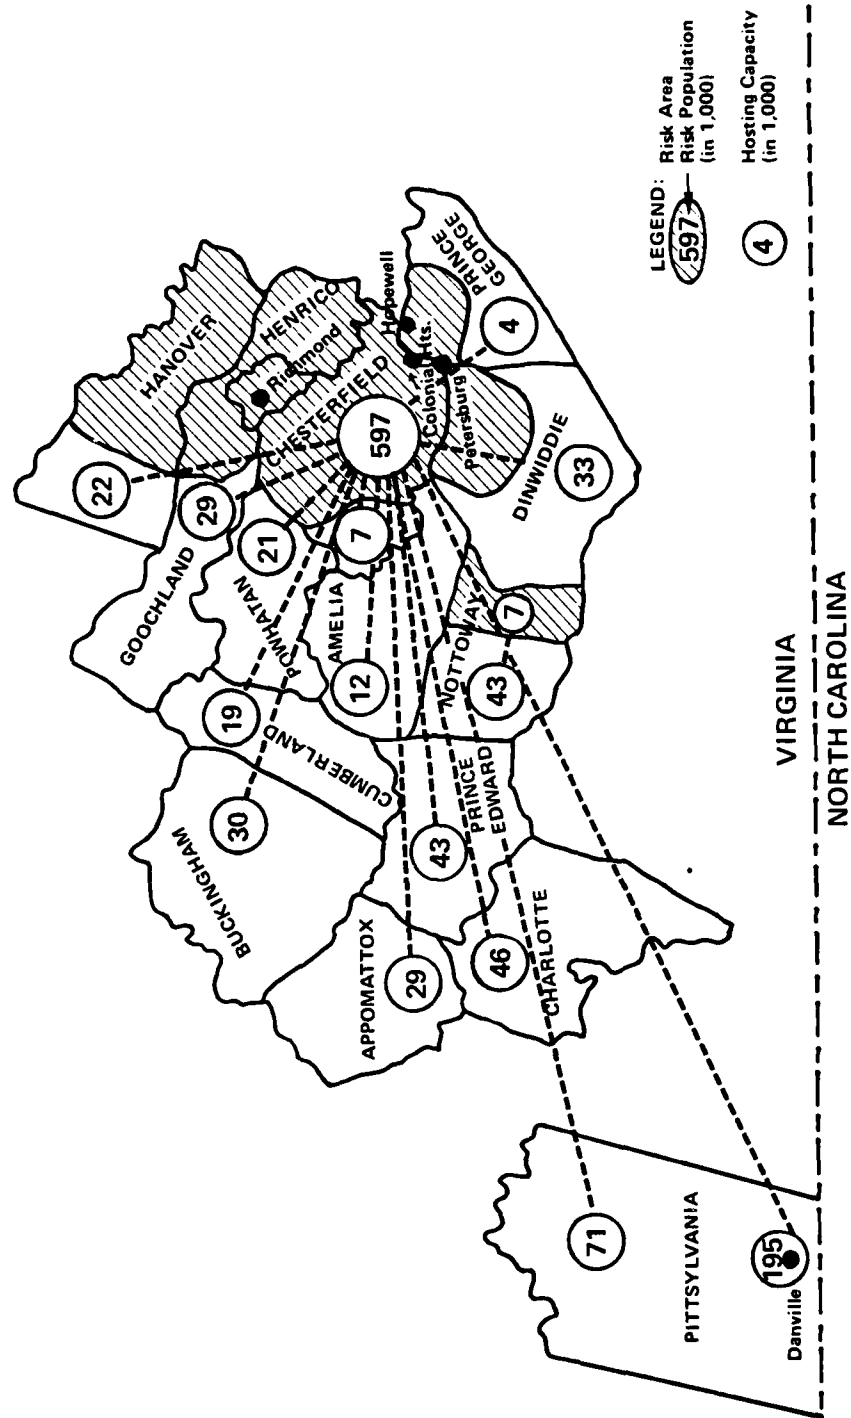

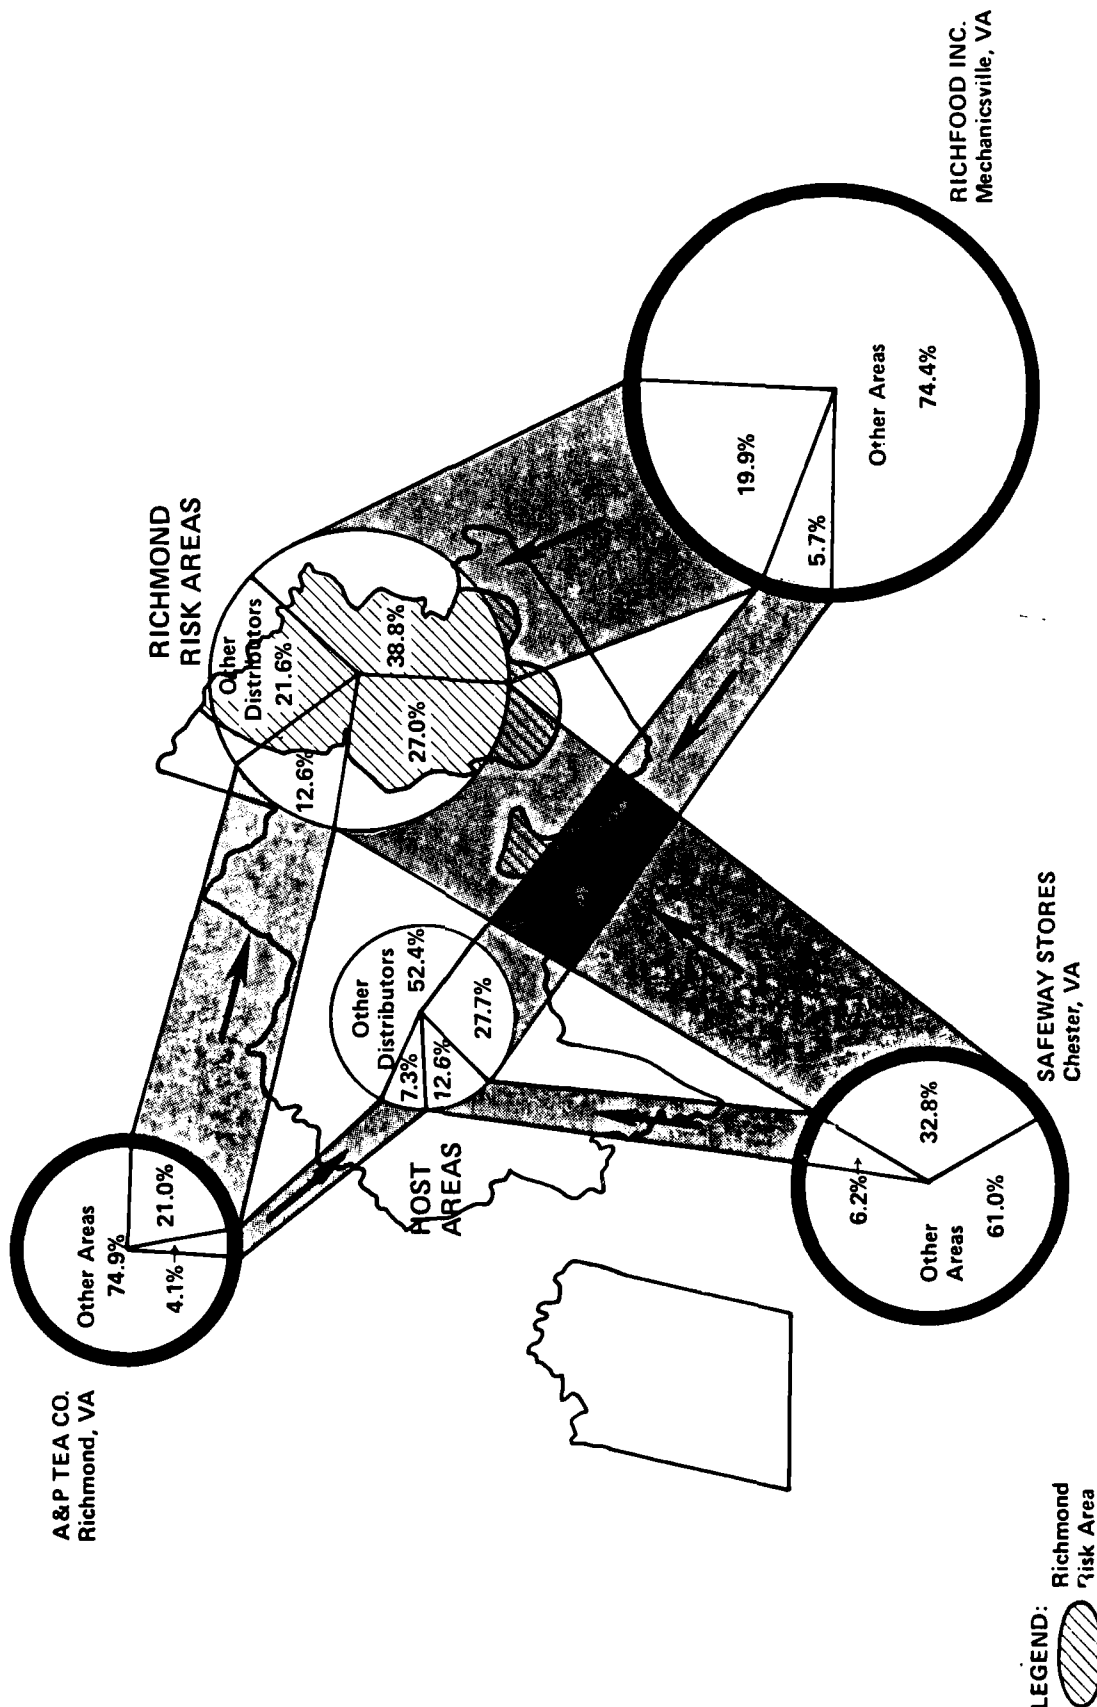

EXHIBIT 2

MAJOR SOURCES OF SUPPLY TO RICHMOND RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE CURRENT DISTRIBUTION PATTERN

RICHMOND RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE
PROPOSED FOOD DISTRIBUTION SYSTEM ADJUSTMENTS FOR CRISIS RELOCATION

The chief adjustment in the food distribution system in support of the crisis relocation strategy entails the shift of supplies from risk area retail outlets to host area retail outlets and mass feeding centers. In general, Richmond wholesale warehouses serving the conglomerate population before evacuation will continue to do so after evacuation by shifting deliveries from their risk area stores to their host area stores. Food will be delivered to relocatees through a combination of retail outlets and mass feeding centers. Wholesale warehouses with no host-area outlets will supply mass feeding centers directly. Major food processing activities in the risk area will continue operations throughout the evacuation period. Detailed reallocation for each distributor serving the conglomerate may be found in Attachment A-2.

In addition to the redirection of flow suggested in the plan, distributors should consider using a shuttle system in which full trailers are left in the host area as storage depots, emptied, and replaced with another trailer load on the return trip. This mode of operation would alleviate much of the need for additional storage space, but it could also increase the requirement for trailers as much as 100%, depending on the transportation stress level experienced by individual warehouse. Another modification of the food distribution system would involve redirecting incoming shipments to available warehouse space in the host areas. Emergency warehouse space can be converted from available unused buildings or commandeered from less critical industries in the host areas. NCP planners surveying the host areas should be on the lookout for suitable warehouse space.

Exhibit 4 shows the revised distribution plans for the three major distributors serving the Richmond conglomerate. These plans have been expressed both in terms of a percentage increase in shipments to the distributor's stores in individual counties, and in terms of the estimated increase in tonnage of essential commodities going to each county. Host area residents and evacuees lodged with host area residents, will obtain food through their customary retail outlets. Evacuees lodged in congregate care facilities will obtain food through a combination of mass feeding centers and retail outlets.

Section 3.B.2 also shows the percentage of truck capacity by weight and volume devoted to the shipment of critical foodstuffs. As an additional planning aid, this information is broken down into case- and pallet-loadings for two truckloads capable of feeding 3,800 citizens (See Attachment B). Suggested shipping guidelines on essential foodstuffs for wholesalers serving the host area retail outlets may be found in Section 3.B.1.

Although the total post-relocation demand for food in each county can be estimated in advance, the exact split between mass feeding centers and retail outlets will not be known until the relocation is accomplished. The need for mass feeding centers is largest in Danville, which hosts the largest share of evacuees (32% of the total risk population). The demand for food in this host area is likely to exceed the capacity of the local retail outlets. The outlets of Richfood and Safeway Stores will experience demand increases in excess of 500% in the absence of any mass feeding centers. Hence the establishment of mass feeding centers should be an integral part of the planning process in Danville. In the absence of mass feeding centers, retail store throughput is likely to exceed 500% of normal demand in several other jurisdictions, including Buckingham, Cumberland, Goochland, Nottoway, Pittsylvania and Powhatan counties. Hence mass feeding centers should receive high planning priorities in these counties as well.

RICHMOND RISK AREA CONGLOMERATE TRANSPORTATION STRESS

To explore quantitatively the extent of the strain placed on the local delivery system of a warehouse as a result of crisis relocation, a transportation stress factor (defined as the ratio of post-evacuation ton-miles to pre-evacuation ton-miles) is estimated for the three major distributors serving the Richmond Risk Area Conglomerate. From the standpoint of the Richmond Risk Area, the transportation stress factor can be considered to have two components:

- (1) Additional mileage imposed by the movement of Richmond residents away from their normal source of supply.
- (2) Mileage requirements imposed by the continued operation of the remaining distribution network, some of which will be reconfigured in response to other risk area movements.

The transportation stress imposed by the relocation of Richmond alone ranges from 3.6 in the case of Richfood's Mechanicsville warehouse and A & P's Richmond warehouse to a high of 8.3 experienced by Safeway's Chester warehouse. These stress factors would be cause for concern if they represented the entire distribution volume of these warehouses. However, food shipments into the Richmond Risk Area Conglomerate account for only two-fifths of the sales from Safeway's Chester warehouse, and only 25% of the warehouses of Richfood and A & P. Remaining shipments from these warehouses are scattered throughout Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland, and West Virginia, and are not significantly affected by crisis relocation. The relative stability of these long distance shipments will serve to offset the effects of movement out of the Richmond conglomerate. In order to assess the consequences of crisis relocation on a particular warehouse, the transportation stress factor must be computed for the entire geographic area served by the warehouse.

Although the detailed evaluation of other Virginia risk conglomerates was beyond the scope of the current study, it is possible to develop a rough estimate of transportation stress for the remainder of each distributor's service area by using approximation techniques developed in earlier SYSTAN work (Food System Support of the Relocation Strategy, September, 1975). Using this technique, the total transportation stress for the three major Richmond distributors can be estimated. This stress ranges from 1.4 for A & P (Richmond warehouse) and Richfood (Mechanicsville warehouse), and 1.8 for Safeway (Chester warehouse). Since research has shown that existing transportation equipment is not generally used to capacity, driver and vehicle productivity can be increased by relaxing regulatory constraints (e.g. relaxing driver restrictions and weight limitations) and improving utilization of existing equipment (e.g. shipping only full-pallet loads; eliminating slack in current vehicle schedule; relaxing maintenance requirements; shipping only essential items; and eliminating light loads). By implementing these productivity improvements, it is estimated that no increase in drivers for A & P's Richmond and Richfood's Mechanicsville warehouses, while a 20% increase in drivers is called for at Safeway's Chester warehouse.

Whenever trailers are shuttled and used for host area storage, it is estimated that one additional trailer will be needed for each trailer employed for storage if the transportation stress level experienced by the warehouse exceeds 1.8. As the stress level falls below 1.8, some existing trailers may become available for host area storage. The number of trailers which can be used in this fashion increases as the stress level drops. At a stress level of 1.0, it is estimated that as much as 50% of the existing trailer fleet could be used for on-site storage in the host areas.
